We were glad to see some of our members attend the event, and see the different local communities and work so well together.

The day started of cold with on and of light rain, however it soon cleared up and we were able to start the program without any hitches. The atmosphere created by the 108 yagna's and the load chanting of the mantras was extremely spiritual. There were many moving moments that morning but there were two that stand out very vividly are, a small girl maybe 3-4 years old copying her mother in everything she was doing, while clearly and loudly reciting the entire mantra. The other was of a young girl of maybe 9-10 years old, she was having hard time keeping the havan lit, a very king gentleman got up from where he was sitting and started to assist her.

When the yagna ended they handed out tapes to the attendees, and the swamiji handed out prasad and a beautifully photographed coffee table book depicting the temples in North America. Who says you have to go to India to see such craftsmanship, Many of them are in our backyards we just have to take the time to look,
